

Governor Little makes appointments to Seventh Judicial District Court

Friday May 10, 2019

Boise, Idaho – Governor Brad Little announced today appointments to the Seventh Judicial District Court.

Steven W. Boyce is appointed as District Judge to Idaho's Seventh Judicial District. A vacancy was created in the Seventh Judicial District Court when Honorable Gregory W. Moeller was appointed to the Idaho Supreme Court by former Idaho Governor C.L. "Butch" Otter.

"Judge Boyce has distinguished himself as a thoughtful and prudent attorney and jurist, committed to the people of southeast Idaho," Governor Little said. "His continued service to the State of Idaho is thoroughly appreciated."

Boyce practiced law in southeast Idaho for more than 20 years before being selected to serve as magistrate judge of the Seventh Judicial District in Idaho Falls. He is a graduate of the University of Idaho College of Law.

"I am extremely honored to have been selected by Governor Little for this position," Boyce said. "I look forward to serving this great region of Idaho and will strive to live up to the expectations placed on me through this appointment."

Idaho's Seventh Judicial District serves Bingham, Bonneville, Butte, Clark, Custer, Fremont, Jefferson, Lemhi, Madison, and Teton counties.
